

Proposal

To go with my theme for a freelancing webpage, I decided to go with a lighthearted game to filter out potential persons who might ask to partner with me on a project. The initial acceptance isn't based on whether they can win the game but rather, whether they attempted to play the game or not. I chose this because I'm kind of tired of working with people who are so professional that its miserable to work with them. If I can choose who I want to partner with on a project I want to partner with lighthearted easy-going individuals who don't mind playing around for a purpose.